Need for more information on rights in the online environment

"More than three quarters (76%) of respondents indicate that they would find it useful to know more about their rights in the online environment. Half of the respondents indicated that they would find knowing more about their rights in the online environment fairly useful, while over a quarter (26%) consider it very useful."

Do you know where your rights in the digital world?

The European Commission recently released a Declaration for Digital Rights, which doesn't introduce any new rights, but rather collects in one place all existing rights relevant to the digital age, becoming the reference point for the EU's idea of a fair and ethical digital environment.
